

Dr. Scot Waterman, who is executive director of the Racing Medication and Testing Consortium, received his veterinary degree from the University of Illinois College Of Veterinary Medicine in 1990. After spending eight years as a private small animal practitioner, he redirected his career, graduating with honors from the University of Arizona Race Track Industry Program in May 2001. While completing his final semester, he began working for the National Thoroughbred Racing Association's Racing Integrity and Drug Testing Task Force.

Dr. Waterman co-authored the Task Force's Supertest Report, which was released in May 2002. Early in 2002, he worked to facilitate the development of the Racing Medication and Testing Consortium and February 2003 was named the organization's first executive director. He was awarded the North American Pari-Mutuel Regulators Association's Winner's Circle Award in April 2004 and received the John K. Goodman Alumni Award from the Arizona Race Track Industry Program in December 2005.

Dr. Waterman was born in Milton, Florida, on July 25, 1966. He lives in Lexington, Kentucky, with his wife, Amy. He is also involved in the Thoroughbred industry as an owner and as a breeder.
